When Selma, the blind and the bold
Told the tale of the untold
We could grow old

And as she gets strangled you're holding my hand
In prayer that we'll never end
Oh no we'll never end

As a snowflake endures on my tongue
In seconds before it's gone
We'll be
Dew before the sun

See! It's unnecessary to be afraid
We will join the great parade
And we'll sing
Hallelujah to the King
In a different light we will see
Who we were meant to be

See! It's unnecessary to be afraid
We will join the great parade
And we'll sing
Hallelujah to the King
In a different light we will see
Who we were meant to be

Until then
We're just like the sun and the moon
I'll fade if you set too soon!
Sun and moon! Be still!

Your breath - the most perfect of songs
On hills and in valleys
Of longing
We can go
On and on

I'll sing to your maker and praise
Your wonders and the He will raise
A banner of love

And though I know
That thousands of poets have sung
Your beauty
Then none of them, none have seen
That you belong with me
