I remember searching hard to find the answers
Never did I bother to doubt the questions
Oh, it was so hard to see
I never wondered why the words we mutter
Move with such a passion from one to one another
Oh, it was so hard to see
When I filled my lungs
The sea rushed in to stop my heart at once
It was so hard to breathe
Can you tell me
Why the cold hits so much harder than the heat
It's so hard to see

I remember being lost in the desert
The sun shining down like I've never witnessed
Oh, it was so hard to see
The winds were blowing sand against my open sleeves
I begged forgiveness from the heat
Oh, it was so hard to see
When I filled my lungs
The storm rushed in to dry my brittle tongue
It was so hard to breathe
Can you tell me
Why the desert sun hits harder than the breeze
It's so hard to see

Can you tell me
Why the water that doused the fire boils in the heat
It's so hard to see
