Long before I said I need you.
It was long before, I said I'd find you.
It was long before, I said I knew you.
I listened to the knock on empty doors.

One more chance to see your footprint or to see your hand in mine.
One more underrated hope was sent in just a nick of time.
One more chance to tell my story, one more chance to sing a song.

Long before I said I need you.
It was long before, I said I'd find you.
It was long before, I said I knew you.
I listened to the knock on empty doors.

One more minute, one more moment.
One more chance for me to say.
Words can never do you justice as you take my breath away.
As open arms were closing quickly, open minds were fading fast.

Long before I said I need you.
It was long before, I said I'd find you.
It was long before, I said I knew you.
I listened to the knock on empty doors.

No more leaving words unspoken.
No more hiding how I feel.
No regrets for all my choices, no more taking time to kneel.
One more weakness to uncover, one more chance to make it last.

Long before I said I need you.
It was long before, I said I'd find you.
It was long before, I said I knew you.
I listened to the knock on empty doors. Long before.
