I'm not here to place the blame on either one of us
But I fear that you're fading and if I wait it's too late
I am not proud to be disgusted by your self-abuse
But who said that I didn't inherit it

You, you were never there to defend yourself
You would rather stay home
Dead drunk and dead scared to face the truth

And I am feeling sorry for you
For all that you've passed out on
All the time that you've spent not moving on
Now we're both alone

I don't know you and I don't know if I ever will Yet I'm sure that you gave all you could and more

But you, you were never there to defend yourself
You would rather stay home
Dead drunk and dead scared to face the truth

And I am feeling sorry for you
For all that you've passed out on
All the time that you've spent not moving on
Now we're both alone

I won't sit crying no more
I have to fight this or move on
I've had it, I quit
I'm letting go

You, you were never there to defend yourself
You would rather stay home
Dead drunk and dead scared to face the truth

I am feeling sorry for you
For all that you've passed out on
All the time that you've spent not moving on

I will cry and I will miss you when you're gone for real
