"Haze"

Wandering in and out,
Never wandering close.
Scarlet letters laced with prose.
I saw she took your hand,
From the moment you stepped in.
Not asking any questions,
When the rain set in.

I know the wind is in your eyes,
But you've paid the price to pretend.
You'll never rest on compromise.
Who will be with you in the end?

You've traveled in and out of time.
Left to right you run your hand.
I should have kept a photograph,
But I'll shut your memory out instead.

Was it a waste of your time,
To be held behind your lines?
And without the haze...

Shooting out fantastintense,
A dashing array of timelights.
Elysium's diamond arcade.

What he felt inside,
He couldn't quite put his finger on;
An earmarked strip of an afterlife.

Glistening over the water,
A path of rippled sun blades
Across an empty lake.
His vacuous mind recalls
A date in 1971,
When her touch was warm inside,
Encircled on her face.

She won't be home tonight,
And she won't be home tomorrow.
He remands alone beside an open laroquet.

His broken heart lies on the floor rejected.
In an evil slump his soul's been circumcised.
She restricted him from her light.

Blind eyes were lost somewhere in time.
Within his eyes her pretty lies,
Were lost somewhere in time.
