When you mend the patches of my clothin'
You know every thread goes through my heart Guessin' that the river's gonna dry up Well, I said that's not the reason why we bard Lookin' 'round the corner where I left you Wonderin' whatever led me there Knowin' that a quiet, unconscious feeling could be bought to drown a memory anywhere She said, "I don't want your medicine and I don't need the sparrow in my art When I'm covered by the thunder I get rid of all your breath deep in my lungs splitting in the wind apart
And when I touch the ceiling on a spring day Wishin' it could heed up every crow
So that they could lift me by my shoulders Take me from this frozen lake and let you know Just that I want to be your medicine I want to feed the sparrow in your art
When I'm covered by the thunder I'll get rid of all the breath deep in our lungs Splitting the wind apart Hell I'm still standing 'round the corner where I left you Diggin' up a quite sufficient track Never know when you're behind that angle with a tranquilizer gun in your sweet pad Oh I want to be your medicine I want to feed the sparrow in your art
When we're covered by the thunder we'd become just one and feel the lightning shard Splayed the wind apart
