Under the sky, the cold morning light,
I called out your name.
With nothing I could feel
Nothing I knew was real
I called out your name
Vision a blur, voice in a slur, crying in the rain
One thing I knew, baby it was you.
I called out your name.

I was dreaming of a place where my body never aged,
I called out your name.
I was dreaming of a time when I never lost my mind,
I called out your name.
My vision turned the threat, I woke up in a sweat,
Feeling my spirits drain!
One thing I knew baby it was you.
I called out your name.

I was feeling so old, my body so cold,
Only you I needed to see.
I had fallen so low, you were all I had known
I had to love before I had to leave!

Under the sky, the cold morning light
I called out your name.
With nothing I could feel,
Nothing I knew was real,
I called out your name.
My time was running out!
Still I had to shout, I held my refrain! Whoa!
One thing I knew, baby it was you!
I called out your name.
