Last night I saw you, you were bathing in the solar lid
sky,
Your face I've not seen for a while, how old are you now?
You ma's doing fine now, so I'm walking down the boulevard.
Guess sometimes she finds it hard the life without you,
so cold.

This is the past that at last moves on,
Laugh 'till the last of the money's gone.
Dreams become decayed, you can ease the pain,
Light turns to shade, then back again.
This is the past that at last moves on,
Laugh 'till the last of the money's gone.
Dreams become decayed, you can ease the pain,
Light turns to shade, then back again.

Next time I see you, hope you're smiling like a young boy should,
The last time was not so good, I pray for you now.
Your pa's doing fine now, saw him working down the builder's yard.
Guess sometimes he finds it hard, he's not without you, so cold.

This is the past that at last moves on,
Laugh 'till the last of the money's gone.
Dreams become decayed, you can ease the pain,
Light turns to shade, then back again.
This is the past that at last moves on,
Laugh 'till the last of the money's gone.
Dreams become decayed, you can ease the pain,
Light turns to shade, then back again.

This is the past that at last moves on,
Laugh 'till the last of the money's gone.
Dreams become decayed, you can ease the pain,
Light turns to shade, then back again.
This is the past that at last moves on,
Laugh 'till the last of the money's gone.

Dreams become decayed, you can ease the pain,
Light turns to shade, then back again.
