Seems like the more I think I know

The more I find I don't

Every answer opens up so many questions

anarchy sounds good to me

Then someone asks, "Who'd fix the sewers?"

"Would the rednecks just play king

Of the neighborhood?"

How many liberators

Really want to be dictators

Every theory has its holes

When real life steps in

So how do we feed

And make room for

All the people crowded on our earth

And transfer all that wealth

>From the rich to those who need it

CHORUS

Where do ya draw the line

Where do ya draw the line

I'm not telling you

I'm asking you

Ever notice hard line radicals
Can go on start trips too
Where no one's pure and right
Except themselves
"I'm cleansed of the system."
('Cept when my amp needs electric power)
Or-"The Party Line says no.
Feminists can't wear fishnets."
You wanna help stop war?
Well, we reject your application
You crack too many jokes
And you eat meat
What better way to turn people off
Than to twist ideas for change
Into one more church
That forgets we're all human beings
Where do ya draw the line?
In Toronto someone blew up
A cruise missile warhead plant
10 slightly hurt, 4 million dollars damage
Why not destroy private property
When it's used against you and me
Is that violence
Or self-defence
You tell me
