i took the pain out of my pen i took my self out of my selfish ways and wrote all and wrote all i took the heat off of my hen and took my place upon the roof instead and crowed and crowed

i've made a satyr from a saint i've made a nun out of a lesbian you are the person you've been always you were just too young to know yourself back then and if you think that you can change, well then i hope you're right not even god can change your nature but you can hold back, right?

i took the greed out of my grin and sunk my teeth into my work instead and they followed

i took my seat upon the stand gave my account of what happened and swallowed

you were just too young to know yourself back then

but he can hold out alright
