A town without trains
He runs to meet you Rehearsed a first line
It's left him, thank goodness

And I've grown to accept that people know the next steps

To and through with letters that's finished No new faces except his and he's old

And I've grown to accept
that people know the next steps

Upstream and our stars under one sky
A cabin once stood where we now stand

that people know the next steps
A town without trains
has brought you home again
