Pageturner by Jasper Erkens
There's no use in denying, you're living in a void Staying home all day, never did you any good You've been working for hours, working like a dog
Your novel can wait, correct me if I'm wrong

Preachers in your head
Whisper words unsaid Mister you've become

Your neighbours think that you're already dead
But I know you're still living
But you're living in your head
You're socially dead, and you don't even care
I see your scattered notes, everywhere

Preachers, in your head
Whisper, words unsaid...Mister, you've become a page turner

You are a page turner
You are a page turner
You are a page turner
