I know not when,

for time means nothing.
My life is now full,
My dreams fulfilled,
I have done something!
I ask not how,
for I have that skill.
So I do what I want.
Did what I wanted,
I control my will!
I speak not softly,
my voice is loud, echoes.
If you hear me not, listen well;
Purge the well of silence, sound bellows.
I dream not foolishly,
for those dreams are not wise.
They speak unto you falsely,
Their fallacies remembered, hope in disguise.
I judge not poorly,
for in condemning I am condemned.
Rather look to every man's good,
With goodness and open hearts, an open ear lend.
I cry not silently,
without emotion I die.
I may laugh with crowds,
Or when crowded cry out, never the heartless lie.
I am but man,
and man is perfect only never.
And so on I try to be these things,

Lacking something all that time... now until forever.
