Love has brought us here
She walks around the lake with her eyes set in stone and she throws it in the water
The way the sky looked that night still brings shivers to my spine
She finds herself useless from running away
She buries her hand with the hatchet
Lets run this thing aground
That seems right about your love for discomfort Lets run this thing run it aground Behind the house she plants her new life and buries what used to be her Her life is now completed
