Is this everything, i've dreamed of so much more between the end and where we lie here all hopes and dreams are scavenged from the floor and fed into machines that feed on vacant eyes all of my dreams, always find me far beyond these fake fluorescent skies i know there must be something more, if i could only find the door
then i could free myself and see the world outside where daylight breaks on you and shines into the grey that sleeps beneath your skull daylight breaks on you and burns away the grey that suffocates your soul for now i hold a key, and though i may be lost i know that i will find my way i search endlessly but every time i've thought that i was near the smoke and mirrors lead me astray see the pit boss, steal each tick tock time it seems will suffer at our hands i look for exits in the haze, the dense electric twilight maze i've heard that there is one that leads to sunlit lands daylight, they tell me that it's just a myth they try to betray me with a kiss daylight, they tell me that it can't exist they might never know just what they missed as daylight pours fire into my grey eyes pour grace into my grey life breaks in and lights the way I can't live without the day
