The marriage has gone to my head

The wedding trumpets are dead

Replaced by a static noise

So loud that I can't hear my own voice

Will those signs lead me out of here

Well, just take me somewhere

To the planes where angels sing

Trough the chime and the clattering

For what it's worth the truth might hurt you

There is a little you can do

Then that's what you will do

When shadows fall I will desert you

For what it's worth the truth might hurt you

And with a tear of morning dew...

My temples born anew

Lead me inside

Lead me inside

Lead me inside out of the cold

Let me inside

Feel me inside

When the seed is sown

Our love's dead by dawn

And as the day begins

The sun is soothing my skin

And I am divided

I am divided

For love

I have to say

That all of this time

I waited for someone like you

Your are my dream

Your are my dream

Your are my dream
