I hit every red light,
I threw everything out of the house I left,
But I came back,
Walk backwards through the door,
You didn't save a bit for me,
You didn't nod or disagree,
Our sidewalk is askew,
Our rent is overdue
I'm leaning like a barn,
I'm abandoned like a house, I'm feeling like a knife in a drawer
Admit you brought the drought, You're so dry to the touch,
And I pray for the rain
I'd love to help you bake,
But the killer on your face says you're gone,
You didn't leave a note for me,
You didn't see me sharpening,
My steps are falling through,
Our home is ready to split in two Don't need a sickle to cut you down,
Don't need no divining rod to track you down, The rains are coming and the sky is brown, the weather vane is spinning, Spinning around
