Through the window of her mind I see a picture
It's not finished she's still painting it for me Angry reds and violent blues tear that picture right in two
A tattered canvas that we're both afraid to be, to see

I feel like I'm a stranger in this town
Cause even when I'm here I'm not around
To see what I have built come crashing down
Before my eyes, this time
I'm pouring out my heart to empty seats
I tie myself in knots to make ends meet
I wanna see forever but I've got too far to go
I know she's letting go

She says she "don't know what's right" and I believe her
But you never know the truth 'til it goes wrong
Good intentions, bad results
It seems like everything's my fault
Just like the moonlight when it's scattered by the dawn,
I'm gone

I feel like I'm a stranger in this town
Cause even when I'm here I'm not around
To see what I have built come crashing down
Before my eyes, this time
I'm pouring out my heart to empty seats
I tie myself in knots to make ends meet
I wanna see forever but I've got too far to go
I know she's letting go

She don't care cause she don't stare at me the same
And her smile it comes too slow
I'm aware of all the things I have to learn, and how much she already knows

I feel like I'm a stranger in this town
Cause even when I'm here I'm not around
To see what I have built come crashing down
Before my eyes, this time

I'm pouring out my heart to empty seats
I tie myself in knots to make ends meet
I wanna see forever but I've got too far to go
I know she's letting go
