"To Reach Out"

Nothing changes with the moon only the shades of emptiness within the room and dark to light, morning never comes too soon

I see the sunlight in your hair I see you smile as you move without a care and the morning, becomes much brighter with you there

But the cold wind comes and a cold wind blows you feel so scared because you're so alone and like a frightened child you call my name, you call my name

But you only had to reach out to reach out and I'll be here reach out, reach out and take my hand.

The past it haunts you like a ghost comes rushing back at you like waves upon the coast threatens what you are and who you love the most

And when the cold wind comes and a tru wind blows and you feel so scared because you're all alone like a frightened child, you call my name
you call my name, you call my name

And you only had to reach out
