Woke up this morning,
radio morning,
thoughts run in circles and set the day I'm all burnt up, no resurrection lying here, slinging ashes at the sun
I can't find what I once knew
I can't find what I once knew
I'm worried my wires are crossed again So worried I've lost my connection desperate need for more distraction won't you take me back to oblivion

Chorus:

This hollow world is holding on to me
My soul, my mind is held magnetically
Electric friction washes over me
It feels so creepy, it feels so creepy

I'm worried I can't find what's real Can't find any other way to feel blackbirds sing sad harmonies lost to humming wires that feed useless agendas make useless breed all you can eat in a world of need a discount price for all your good deeds tell me isn't that all you need?

I Can't find what I once knew
I Can't find what I once knew

This hollow world is holding on to me
Electric friction washes over me
It feels so creepy, it feels so creepy

Woke up this evening, television screaming static burns in my world of dreaming soothed by the light I drop my fist turn my cheek for a cathode ray kiss
I can't find what I once knew

I can't find what I once knew

This hollow world washes over me
My soul, my mind is held magnetically
Electric friction washes over me
It feels so creepy, it feels so creepy

This hollow world
This hollow world
This hollow World
This hollow world
This hollow world
This hollow world
This hollow world
This hollow world
