(Hudson/Selover)

Will I ever love again?

If I do I don't know when

So I'll just pretend you still love me

All my friends will say

The pain will go away

But, that's the price you'll pay for leaving

I want to come running, running

Straight into your arms where I belong

Running, running

Straight into your arms where I belong

And i you ever want me

I'll come running

Everybody knows

That love can come and go

I never thought I'd throw it all away

Every single night

When I turn out all the lights

I make believe that I'm beside you

I want to come running, running

Straight into your arms where I belong

Running, running

Straight into your arms where I belong

And i you ever want me

I'll come running

I know I don't have the right

But, I keep wondering where you are

Ad I, I want you to know

That you're always inside me

Running, running

Straight into your arms where I belong

Running, running

Straight into your arms where I belong

And i you ever want me

I'll come running
