(Justin Tubb)

Your lips look hard and cold now they once were soft and warm
And I can see that misery has got you by the arms
Your eyes tell me the story you've really been around Now you're back at home but no one have noticed you're back in town
But I do cause I used to care
I used to love you and I'd know you anywhere.

You walk familiar streets now but you look out of place
And the life you've had since love went bad is written on your face
You used hold your head high but now it's bowed in shame
And the friends who used to know you well they don't even know your name
But I do cause I used to care.

I used to love you and I'd know you anywhere
And I guess I still love you so I'd know you anywhere...
