Yeah!

"This is gonna work," had been sent to the phone That conversed through every temperature as I walked home alone
From whatever stupid aimless party I had just been to Another colorless old memory that I wished simply just to see you

Highways closed for good
The moment you finally arrived (finally arrived)
Remember that summer
Of two thousand five
When you only visited the back of my

You're no longer handwritten with stationary smile (stationary smile)
Or built out of electricity, counting every mile (counting every mile)
Look me in the eyes and tell me that it's not that tough Analyzing every reason that no one's ever been good enough

In between fragments of daily life and
The bottom of my flask
I believe I've found the one sensation strong enough to last
Anticipation wins the prize for second best
This is our only chance for no regrets

Highways closed for good
The moment you finally arrived (finally arrived)
Remember that summer
Of two thousand five
When you only visited the back of my

It took so long to get here,
How many years have disappeared?
Into perfection?
(What am I going to do with you?)

It took so long to get here,
How many years have disappeared?
Into perfection?
(What am I going to do with you?)

Highways closed for good
The moment you finally arrived
Remember that summer
Of two thousand five
When you only visited the back of my mind?

Could this be too perfect?
Could this night never end?
This night we will adore
This night I am all yours

Now we can evict
Any selfish thoughts
This night what will it bring?
This night will mean everything
