

Today the Moon, Tomorrow the Sun "Terrain"

I know it was the best winter you ever had
But you can't live there any longer
Cause it's dead and forgotten
And growing further away
With every passing little moment
We're caught in wheels that keep turning
Heading straight towards barricades
And as the ground just gets rougher
The ride just gets tougher
And we gotta learn not to suffer, though it.

Terrain's changin' baby

So, you bet it all on your heart attack
Terrain is changing; so maybe we shouldn't stay.

I want you to want to
But I can't decide for you
You're not on your own side
I've read your eyes, they say,
"That it's over so fast, so hard to throw the past to the back"
But it's keepin' you up nights
And makin' you sleep late
You take yourself right outside yourself
And give a good long look

Terrain's changin' baby

So, you bet it all on your heart attack
Terrain is changing; so maybe we shouldn't stay
