You asked me why you were made of dots
and why you always were chased by robots
I damn know that it makes you sick
that your movement's decided by a joystick

He was born in '84 in a Commodore 64
He didn't wanna be inside of it anymore
So he jumped out the TV and sat down to the floor
Then he grabbed the TAC-2 and jumped out the door Now he's free and noone is chasing him no more Now he's the master and no need for high scores
In this world there's no bonus for winning a war But he likes this place and feels sad he's never been in here before, c'mon

and why you always were chased by robots
I damn know that it makes you sick
that your movement's decided by a joystick
(That your movement's decided by a joystick)

Now he's starting to get hold of this self-control thing Making his own choice is just a hell-of-a-thing Pressing a button can make a phone ring, ring
So he called the government and began to sing
"There's a lot of people better needing your bucks!"
Sing with me or feel my sting, now he's happy, and now he's the king

and why you always were chased by robots
I damn know that it makes you sick
that your movement's decided by a joystick

and why you always were chased by robots
I damn know that it makes you sick
that your movement's decided by a joystick

and why you always were chased by robots

I damn know that it makes you sick
that your movement's decided by a joystick

and why you always were chased by robots
I damn know that it makes you sick
that your movement's decided by a joystick

and why you always were chased by robots
I damn know that it makes you sick
that your movement's decided by a joystick

and why you always were chased by robots
I damn know that it makes you sick
that your movement's decided by a joystick
