Why don't you write your mother?
Why don't you call your family?
They're expecting an answer
Spare them your strange behavior

What of your expectations
Weren't you going to show us all?
Some new kind of dancer
This seasons singing savior

I'm too far gone
And it's no use pretending
I could ever forget what I done
I'm already too far gone

I got no bridges left to burn
It's better to keep moving on
It's such a long way down, too far to fall
Too much trouble to turn back around

Think of your friends and neighbors
Suffering through your lamest years
You must owe them something
Come now, you must remember

Haven't you finished playing?
Get down to business soon
Because your lean years are coming
June now but come December

I'm too far gone
And it's no use pretending
I could ever forget what I done
I'm already too far gone

It's better to keep moving on
It's such a long way down, too far to fall
Too much trouble to turn back around

It's such a long way down, too far to fall
Too much trouble to turn back around
