I've got a great big problem that I can't fix
I think it's quarter to three when it's half past six
Everything's early or way too late
Now I never can remember the day and the date

Never used to be this much trouble before
I used to watch the clock but not anymore
I used to keep track of the time I'd lose
But now the whole thing has me so confused

I have to find a new job every week or so
'Cause no one needs a man who's always fast or slow
Still you'll get no complaint from me
But what could the answer be

Tell me where does the time go when I'm with you?
How many hours do I lose every day?
They recombine when I'm missing you
Slowing me down like a digital delay

Where does the time go when I'm with you?
Why does it seem like there's never enough?
It's just like I'm living split in two
Two kinds of time when you're out and you're in love

There's only so much pleasure a man can take
(So much pleasure a man can take)
'Til his brain starts to go and his senses fade
(Brain starts to go and his senses fade)

Doesn't need to eat or drink or sleep
Can't feel a thing, 'cause he's in too deep
Walks around thinking that the world is fine
While an alien force takes over his mind

And then he throws away every single dime
(Throws away every single dime)
And the last thing to go is his sense of time
(Last thing to go is his sense of time)

But then if you're having fun
Who cares if you're that far gone?

Tell me where does the time go when I'm with you?
How many hours do I lose every day?
They recombine when I'm missing you
Slowing me down like a digital delay

Where does the time go when I'm with you?
Why does it seem like there's never enough?
It's just like I'm living split in two
Two kinds of time when you're out and you're in love

They tell me that time's not free
What did time ever do for me?
And if I don't see that's wrong
Then maybe I'm too far gone

Tell me where does the time go when I'm with you?
How many hours do I lose every day?
They recombine when I'm missing you
Slowing me down like a digital delay

Where does the time go when I'm with you?
Why does it seem like there's never enough?
It's just like I'm living split in two
Two kinds of time when you're out and you're in love

Where does the time go when I'm with you?
How many hours do I lose every day?
They recombine when I'm missing you
Slowing me down like a digital delay

Where does the time go when I'm with you?
Why does it seem like there's never enough?
It's just like I'm living split in two
Two kinds of time when you're out and you're in love

Where does the time go when I'm with you?
How many hours do I lose every day?
They recombine when I'm missing you
Slowing me down like a digital delay
