Sitting, attractively bored
I guess I had this coming, it's been a long time coming Casually she kills me, attractively bored
I leave too much unsaid, I leave too much unsaid

You've got the sand in the palm of your hand
Don't let it slip away
Regret haunts forever, don't try to be clever
To shatter these weak walls

And finally he approaches, the one he's watched so long
He musters up his courage, hello
Then he turns around and heads back to the daily life he knows
When a tap upon his shoulder, hello

Sweating, my swagger ignored
And I'm swaying on the border, got to get my life in order
Casually she stills me, attractively scarred
I leave too much unsaid, I leave too much unsaid

You've got the sand in the palm of your hand
Don't let it slip away
Regret haunts forever, don't try to be clever
To shatter these weak walls

And finally he approaches, the one he's watched so long
He musters up his courage, hello
Then he turns around and heads back to the daily life he knows
When a tap upon his shoulder, hello

You've got the sand in the palm of your hand
Don't let it slip away
Regret haunts forever, don't try to be clever
To shatter these weak walls

And finally he approaches, the one he's watched so long

He musters up his courage, hello
Then he turns around and heads back to the daily life
he knows
When a tap upon his shoulder, hello

And finally he approaches, the one he's watched so
long
He musters up his courage, hello
Then he turns around and heads back to the daily life
he knows
When a tap upon his shoulder, hello
