Smoke-colored L.A. sky

Hand covers up your sleepless eyes

As morning creeps in

Passed out there on my couch

Wearing the face of down and out

My long lost friend

Three cups of coffee and you'll be on your way

Until this time tomorrow you come crawling

Back again

Open your heart to me

Think of my shoulder as as sanctuary

Open your soul to me

I'll try to unravel your tangled up dreams

And the only thing that matters is your heart stays open
for me

I always made pictured you

As clear minded but confused with wounds

No one could see

You always made the friends

That never stuck with you until the end

Except for me

And the only difference I hear is your alibi

And the only thing in common is the reason

You're still here

Open your heart to me

Think of my shoulder as sanctuary

Open your soul to me

I'll try to unravel your tangled up dreams

And the only thing that matters is your heart stays open
for me

I can feel your loneliness

I feel your pain
