I've got no time to toy around with your cinematic antics
Don't you know that my hour's compendiary, and you know that I will disagree So flashing money can never set a mind apart, you should know better than I How certain folk are just immune to temptation

Oh the world's such a turbid little place here
So before you sign a waiver Give yourself a moment to examine a little closer, I think you'll find that No one's handing any favors Nothing's free, there's always a price to pay Come on it's so obvious
All along, so obvious

So set aside the show; I'm not impressed with your cinematic antics
You can try and find someone on the other side and more nefarious than me But I highly doubt that no matter where you look, you'll never quite have in hand
The kind of cards you're looking for; they're all taken
