now, I am a woman and you are a man I was born different from you on this earth we both stand now, as a daughter I have learned rules and laws what to say and not to say what's acceptable to be called in the woman's boat on the woman's sea they are calling us they are calling us to sea and yes, I have my worries about the human race you see my breasts are aching and I hope it's not too late for the woman's boat on the woman's sea they are calling us and they're calling me how the seasons change they rock and they rage will I please allow the thunder and the birth inside of me now do you believe in powers like the human and the seed and how evolution happens how the whirlpool spins in me oh grandmother tell us your secrets your stories passed down through the years could I really believe it? is there something happening here? in the woman's boat on the woman's sea is there something hidden something to see oh the seasons change they're rocky and they rage will I please allow the thunder and the birth inside of me
