lights in the windows
snow in the street
kids on the ice rink
the cop on the beat
coming back home to find nothing has changed
and yet everythings different now, isnt it strange

something is moving
something is gone
the clock hands have stopped but the ticking goes on I lie in the darkness
and yet at the seams
of the night its as though something flickers and gleams

I dreamed I was a prisoner
I dreamed of a wall
I tried to fly over
and started to fall
I awoke and reached out just as though you were there oh this distance
just doesnt seem fair

didnt I tell you
didnt I just
when water meets iron
its iron that rusts
oh I was the strong one right up till the end
when your tenderness broke me and healed me again

now who do you think Im crying for now that Ive finally unlocked the door
oh Ive got no regrets

but I see theres a price cause I cant stand alone any more

stars in the sky
the moment was there
but the moment slipped by yet something stays with me it stays and it stays though theres four thousand miles arent there four thousand ways or at least one or two you know one of these days Im gonna find my way back to you
