one more time two people are saying goodbye and one more time everyones wondering why they were such a perfect couple, how can this be so? there are reasons, but sometimes even they arent sure that they know

and maybe its because her mother maybe its because his father maybe its what they did or didnt do maybe its the times we live in the strain of this nuclear age where men have the power and women have only rage or maybe its just that her eyes are brown and her lovers eyes are blue maybe its a phase the whole damn world is going through but whether its all or none of the above ahh, nobody knows whats happening to love no nobody knows whats happening to love and one more time we try to figure love out oldfashioned dreams collide with newfangled doubt oh there are couples who seem to make it, with or without romance but even they cant tell you how much is due to chance and Id say weve got a problem right before we begin weve got these heads full of rational thinking wrapped inside this animal skin with a heart caught in between that tries to balance on a very fine line ah, if you ask me its a case of bad design and you can lie on that couch for hours digging up the dirt analyzing all your memories reliving all your hurt but in the end youre still a prisoner locked inside your cell the only difference is now you know the walls too well every corner, every crevice every mark upon the floor ah you know everything except how to find the key to the door and maybe its because your mother maybe its because your father

maybe its what they did or didnt do maybe its the times we live in-acapo
