over Queen Charlotte Sound
the lichen-covered rocks below are grey and rust-brown foam on the water like filigree sun scatters sequins of gold on the sea and Ted with the logbook and his head bent down while Im holding her steady

over the mountains now
valley after valley of smoky jade and shadow snowy range rises against the blue like a fantasy magic-lantern view and were as tiny as a speck of dust on the screen lost in a world no ones ever seen

engine droning landing on some nameless lake pontoons rocking gently on the water drift in silence when we cut the motor drift in silence
drift in silence
