I seldom believed that I would fight this dreadful dew
I never thought that I could find myself in loving you Always searching for something
Always being misunderstood
Do I have to blame it all on myself
Or take a look back in my childhood

Dawning waves echoing through my body
Sound my nature's fantasy
That has always been a secret game of my minds conspiracy
The wrinkles of my fathers face left me a chasing memory
That's just another consequence of society's poverty

Time to reunite
And banish the hatred between the loving of mankind
One thing more to do, unbelievable, but true
And educate the church in a contradictory point of view
No more hide and no more seek But making up for waste of time and taking a loose reign
An old friend dignity observed his identity
He smiled and said:
you're a man now, so take the responsibility.
