I can, see through your lies
But when I'm with you, I can't help but shut my eyes,
And it all fades away,
as I fall for every empty word you say.

I see your face and feel the confidence I lack,
My worries vanish when you put your, hand on my back.
I won't, let you get away, with anything, then I can't help but believe you, when you say I mean everything.
I have, to tell myself that your love isn't true,
why do I mean nothing to you?

I can, see through your lies
But when I'm with you, I can't help but shut my eyes,
And it all fades away,
as I fall for every empty word you say.

You lean away from me, a smirk across your perfect
face,
And I know that in the morning,
You'll have left without a trace.
To stay away takes strength, and I'm not strong,
It isn't right but I can't tell, my right from wrong.

I can, see through your lies
But when I'm with you, I can't help but shut my eyes,
And it all fades away,
as I fall for every empty word you say.

If I, give you my heart, you will use it,
but what's to fear, you've already, torn me apart.
What's it about me, what do you see?
You're dangerous, I want you. . .
Oh, why did you come to me?

I'm so easy,
all, yours to use,
But I'm sick, and I'm tired of,
All of your abuse. (All for you, to use)

I can, see through your lies

But when I'm with you, I can't help but shut my eyes,
And it all fades away,
as I fall for every empty word you say.
As I fall for every empty word. . . you say.
