"Destinations"

We wake up every single day,
Just try to find the fastest way,
To get through all the things that,
We could be, but we don't pause to see,
The things that make the world so fine,
To stop is just a waste of time,
No we just keep on trying to cross the line,
And keep the end in sight,

Lost dreams that we're still chasing,
There's no prize but we're still racing,
Towards our destinations,
But we don't know,
Just when to stop,
Without appreciation of time and all creation,
We seek our destinations,
But we can't see just what we've got.

How could've we become so blind,
The best of times are all behind,
And now we're left to wonder,
What the hell is here for us to find.

Lost dreams that we're still chasing,
There's no prize but we're still racing,
Towards our destinations,
But we don't know,
Just when to stop,
Without appreciation of time and all creation,
We seek our destinations,
But we can't see just what we've got.

And how could we have been so blind,
To miss the things we put aside,
Cause we don't know just when to stop,
What's been lost and what we've got,

Lost dreams that we're still chasing,
There's no prize but we're still racing,
Towards our destinations,
But we don't know,

Just when to stop,
Without appreciation of time and all creation,
We seek our destinations,
But we can't see just what we've got.
