

The Legendary Pink Dots

"Nine Shades To The Circle"

Visit "Nine Shades To The Circle" on MotoLyrics.com

Like any other day,
I heard the bell and grabbed my coat.
Snatched a coffee and nearly choked
And semi-cartwheeled headfirst in the rain.

I knew I had to make that train.
My life depended on that train.

A laughing bag sang 'Giant Panda'...
Evil Santa punishes the bad boys,
And once I told myself a lie.

I never quite figured out the reason why...
But everybody's pointing at me.
Laughing at me.
Pointing and me and laughing at me...
Pushing...

Pushing...

They're pushing...

Pushing...

Pushing...

Stop pushing!
Don't push me!

Like any other day,
I heard the bell and grabbed my coat.
I snatched a coffee, nearly choked
And semi-cartwheeled...
Cartwheeled headfirst in the rain.

I knew I had to make the train.
My life depended on the train.

A junkie stopped me for some change.
Pulled a knife...

CUT!

Like any other day,
I heard the bell and grabbed my coat.
Snatched a coffee, nearly choked
And semi-cartwheeled headfirst in the rain.

I knew I had to make that train.
My life depended on that train.

And we met there on the platform...
So you took me to your room.
And though you reached out for me; I couldn't touch
you.

I watched you melt in tears.
50,000 tears.

The radio exploded...

I found your ear wrapped in a tissue.
Tried to lose you...
Lose you...

Like any other day,
I heard the bell and grabbed my coat.
I snatched a coffee, nearly choked
And semi-cartwheeled headfirst in the rain...

I knew I had to make that train.
My life depended on that train...

(Did you get it?)

Visit The Legendary Pink Dots page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.