Oh, she'd walk down every road I ever set my eyes upon

Wish she could take care of every dream I ever set my heart upon

I wish she could step free of every weight I ever leaned my weight upon

Laying low, let the good things come

Laying low, let the good things come

Wish she could walk out of every scene of every game I ever played

I wish she could move on from every place in every town I ever stayed

I wish she could let go and hold on on anything I wanted to

Letting go, let the good things come

Letting go, let the good things come

Letting go, let the good things come

I wish she could see you in better times and longer days to waste away

I wish she could be you and see the world another way, another way

I wish she could get through to every face and every friend I ever knew
