Iâ€™m on a white line runninâ€™ down the interstate.
Tryinâ€™ to wipe away the rain thatâ€™s runninâ€™ down my face.

Goinâ€™ any old ware, any old place, just some place else.

By now you know, that Iâ€™m not there, and if you donâ€™t know why.

Well, canâ€™t you see the tears it took for me to say good-bye.

Yeah, I left a few on your old sweater.
I watched them fall on a love sick letters
and I cried a river, cried a mile wide one Iâ€™d even cried some crocodile ones.
But from out here you canâ€™t hear me callinâ€™.
and you wonâ€™t see me when I start fallinâ€™,
Cause this time, baby the next time, that I do,
Iâ€™ll be a far cry from you.

In a moment of truth, itâ€™s a matter of fact.
Thereâ€™s only one way to go, and that ainâ€™t goinâ€™ back.
So I ainâ€™t stopped since I stopped for gas, a hundred miles ago.
And right now Iâ€™m caught somewhere between gone
and gone for good.
And these tears will dry, but there have been times I wondered if they would.

Yeah, I left a few on your old sweater.
I watched them fall on a love sick letters
and I cried a river, cried a mile wide one Iâ€™d even cried some crocodile ones.
But from out here you canâ€™t hear me callinâ€™.
And you wonâ€™t see me when I start fallinâ€™,
Cause this time, baby the next time, that I do,
Iâ€™ll be a far cry from you.

Yeah, from out here you canâ€™t hear me callinâ€™.
And you wonâ€™t see me when I start fallinâ€™,
Cause this time, baby the next time, that I do,
Iâ€™ll be a far cry from you.
