Time is moving fast to the point of no return I'm reaching for tomorrow leaving bridges that I've burned
Here I stand alone with my back against the wall
Tortured by your memory and the feelings I recall

I can't seem to get over you
No matter where I go, no matter what I do
The wall of denial has broken in two
And I can't seem to get over you

Everywhere I turn I see shadows on the wall
A silhouette of sorrow of a man who had it all
Your kiss forever haunts me like a ghost out of the past
It's peaceful for a moment but it never seems to last

I can't seem to get over you
No matter where I go, no matter what I do
The wall of denial has broken in two
And I can't seem to get over you

I'm getting tired of living with these questions in my mind
Is it hopeful to imagine or just a waste of time?
For now I go on dreaming, that's what's keeping me alive
But dreams won't last forever, tell me how will I survive

If I can't seem to get over you
No matter where I go, no matter what I do
The wall of denial has broken in two
And I can't seem to get over you
