This old world can lay so heavy, on my shoulders
And this face in my mirror, keeps getting older
But no matter how much pressures on
I can lay it down, when I get home
'Cause it all just fades away, when I touch you

It's the kind of love that lingers through the ages
A firm foundation built to see us through
So let the storms of life go right on ragin'
For there's calm inside my heart, when I touch you

Years from now, when my life is nearly over
And there's nothing more this world needs me to do
If my feeble hands still strong enough to reach out
I can live a happy man when I touch you

It's the kind of love that lingers through the ages
On a firm foundation built to see us through
So let the storms of life go right on ragin'
For there's calm inside my heart, when I touch you
Yes, it makes everything alright, when I touch you
