There ain't a four lane road within twenty some miles from here
This town ain't got Walmart and never ever will There's a church and a fillin' station where you get your gas

Then there's Dixie Rose Deluxe's Honky Tonk feed store gun shop
Used car beer paint barbecue barber shop laundermat

Well I stop by Dixie's about a half a dozen times a day I ain't there for the super duper deals or the famous fried steak
Dixie's daughter is hotter than a hound on a fresh coon track

Down at Dixie Rose Deluxe's Honky Tonk feed store gun shop

Yeah I got four of everything in there bunch of stuff that I can't use Hundred cans just go on my dad's Ford and I don't even choose Yeah I'm there when they open and I'm there when they close Standing at the check out line just checking out Becky
Jo

She wears nothing to hide sun dress that'll make you melt
Makes a country boy think she got eyes for nobody else Yeah truth is she got us lined up clear out the back

Of old Dixie Rose Deluxe's Honky Tonk feed store gun
shop

Yeah

Paw shouts out, "Where you going?" I tell him, "I'll be right back"

I just remembered I needed a dozen eggs and '87 Cadillac

Some question my persistence aw some might my sanity

But I ain't quitting till that gal is crazy over me
