"Last Night"

Your last words trapped between these bedroom walls
"Why don't we just go away?"
I didn't know, what could I say?

If memories were like shining stars
If tears were diamonds
I'd build a castle in the skies

Last night I wished you were calling
I hoped that you were calling
I beat my fists against the wall

Threw withered roses in the lake
And as I called your name a crying game, too late!

But you can't hurt me anymore your double-dealing love creeped out through my heart's back door

Last night I wished you were calling
I hoped that you were calling
I beat my fists against the wall
Still beat my head against the wall
