Blue tomorrows all your sorrows falling down like rain roses grow and waters flow to wash your pain away reminiscing deeply missing that which seemed so true grateful eyes see darkened skies and turn to shades of you

Turn the page
the war was waged la di da di da discard the hate trust your fate It's the promise of a friend

Souls lie bleeding deeply needing honesty to heal battles fought the truth was sought by one who dared to kneel violation, condemnation, medals for your race inner rage your heart's the gauge for wiping clean the slate

It's not the first time that I've been down this road It's not the worst time to spend some time alone

Tired to stone you're so alone when talking to yourself judgement passed until at last it's tossed upon the shelf burning pride deep inside you sacrifice and then forces linger the fickle finger of fate it strikes again
