"Latvian Dance"

You've got a six lettered name
Hugging my tongue while you're away
But your hand plays the thief
Stealing silent tears of relief
From your cheeks

You've got a six lettered name
And your daughters will do the same
I'd be a fool not to find
Another face, not so sweet
Not so kind

You've got a six lettered name
And you wanted every game
You picked up the deck in your right hand
And solemnly swore to never be seen again
By mortal men, by mortal men

You could've just said 'no'.
