Summer days you were smoking on my porch
You never questioned my motives, I questioned yours
Every word I spoke was written in A book you said that was ours back then

Harvest came and it picked me up
It grabbed me by the throat and said, 'are you ready yet?'

Winter's snow came welcome that year
It wrapped me in it's arms and said you are safer here

You ran away
Graceful like, his hands on your hips
Baby runs away
On foreign airplanes
Just to see if there's a vacant seat
Just to see if there's a vacant seat
