

Loss For Words, A "Jetsetter"

I stood like a czar under a bold Russian sky
Unbreakable.
Unwavering against the curvature of time.
Unbreakable.
And picture me on a crowded Tokyo street.
Unbreakable
In a dingy London meet, or burning in the desert heat.
Unbreakable.

I'm a jet setter, west bound along the highway.
I only wish you could be here now.
If you just look west I'll be racing by the archway.
I only wish you could be here now.

I stood like a czar under the dark, St. Louis sky.
Unbreakable.
Unwavering against the Mississippi tide.
Unbreakable.

I'm a jet setter, west bound along the highway.
I only wish you could be here now.
If you just look west I'll be racing by the archway.
I only wish you could be here now.

I'm shining on.
These days are out of control.
I'm shining on.
Moving faster, so much faster than the world.
I'm shining on.
These days are out of control.
I'm shining on.
Moving faster than the world.
I'm shining on.

I'm a jet setter, west bound along the highway.
I only wish you could be here now.
If you just look west I'll be racing by the archway.
I only wish you could be here now.

I'd have you sing along to every ten cent song.
Your eyes would signal me like a transistor radio.

We'd drink ourselves to sleep.
We'd drink ourselves complete.
Only if you would be here now.
