December morning
Not saying anything
So much for everything
We're running in and on
To an empty space
That'll help us to escape

Feelings that remind them
Of when the rain was starved
And all the sun would do is burn

When I wasn't feeling right
You were the one to say
It's not okay
And I wondered why
On my own
I wasn't feeling right
You were the one to say
It's not okay
And I wondered why
Oh well

Cold hands are holding
Onto anything
So much for everything
We're running in and on
To an empty space
That'll help us to escape

Feelings that remind them
Of when the rain was starved
And all the sun would do is burn

When I wasn't feeling right
You were the one to say
It's not okay
And I wondered why
On my own
I wasn't feeling right
You were the one to say
It's not okay

And I wondered why
Oh well

Despite your best intent
To forget why you spent
The better part of days alone
December morning
Not saying anything
So much for everything

When I wasn't feeling right
You were the one to say
It's not okay
And I wondered why
On my own
It's not okay
And I wondered why

Oh well
Oh well
Oh well.
