

Lost Trailers, The "Overcrowded Town"

Visit "Overcrowded Town" on MotoLyrics.com

I watch the sunset falling down, I hear the voices
coming through this overcrowded town.
And Yes, I know that time it flies by so fast, you better
find yourself something that lasts.

There is just not enough time, to hold on to the past,
When it just makes you bitter, or keeps you looking back.
So if you need someone to, help you in moving on',
I have a will to make right, what has been feeling wrong.

What you need it will be coming around, yes, I will bring it out somehow.

I watch the sunset falling down, I hear the voices
coming through this overcrowded town.
And Yes, I know that time it flies by so fast, you better
find yourself something that lasts.

If this web could be broken, well don't you think I would,
But I am just a fly caught in my neighborhood,
These streets are cracked and scattered, and baked
beyond belief,
One day I'll shake myself free, and step out from the heat.

When I do you will be coming around, yes, I will bring it out somehow.

I watch the sunset falling down, I hear the voices
coming through this overcrowded town.
And Yes, I know that time it flies by so fast, you better
find yourself something that lasts.

Visit Lost Trailers, The page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.